

EXTRAORDINARY TEACHERS

Teacher Happiness Survey Results

We sent out a survey asking teachers how happy you are in the profession. Over 315 teachers filled out in one night, and you guys had a ton to say! Here are the results of top three sections of the survey.

So the first thing we did, was ask teachers to rate how happy they are this year, and here's what you said:

- 31% of you are happy
- 69% of you are okay or worse
- 7 out of 10 teachers are unhappy!

Some of the comments said that you felt...

- overworked
- unappreciated, & disrespected
- “I love teaching, but hate bureaucracy.”
- “I’m happiest when I’m with the kids.”

The second thing we asked teachers is what's working in your classrooms. The top three answers were: connections with students, colleague relations, & classroom management. See the picture for more information.

We also asked teachers what are they struggling with this year?

You said that...

- You're feeling overwhelmed (especially with the Common Core) & you feel like you don't have enough time
- You're feeling a lack of support from administration
- And you're struggling with your school climates

Through the survey, we learned that teachers want:

- More time teaching students
- Time to collaborate
- Time to plan
- Authentic and meaningful professional development
- To feel heard
- To feel appreciated
- To actually teach their students
- To be treated as professionals
- To be respected

See here at extraordinary teachers, we understand teachers because WE ARE teachers! We want to make a difference in the lives of teachers who impact so many other people. We want to give teachers practical, easy to digest, super helpful information to improve their lives and hopefully improve the lives of their students. We hope to provide you with super helpful information that is easy to understand, and you can immediately implement this into your lives.
